UPCOMING SUNDAY SERVICES

SUNDAY AT 10:00 A.M. MST
IN PERSON & LIVE ON YOUTUBE

This month's Woven Faith theme explores covenant as an ongoing practice of building, sustaining, and repairing relationships rooted in love. Through shared commitments, mutual care, and accountability, we deepen our sense of belonging and community. We also explore welcoming and inclusive spaces, Thanksgiving, and Indigenous justice, recognizing that covenant calls us to grow together, respond to injustice, and continually renew our commitments to one another.

November 1, 2026 • "Covenant" with Rev. Charlotte Lehmann
The Woven Faith theme for November is "Covenant"; this morning we will explore what it means to be a covenantal faith and what covenant requires of us. How is the language of covenant woven into the fabric of our UU Shared Values?

November 8, 2026 • "Democracy and Covenant" with Bruce T. Gourley
Bruce T. Gourley, editor of Church & State magazine, published by Americans United for Separation of Church and State, will be our pulpit guest on this Sunday following the Mid-term Elections. The Founding Leaders of our country were deeply steeped in covenant and covenant figures into the documents they drafted for the nation they conceived in liberty and justice for all.

November 15, 2026 • "Towards a More Golden Rule" with Rev. Charlotte Lehmann
The ethic of reciprocity – The Golden Rule – appears in one form or another in many, if not all of the world's philosophical and faith traditions as well as cultures dating back nearly 4000 years. This morning we'll explore this well-known covenantal statement and some later variations on this theme of reciprocity.

November 22, 2026 • "Broken Covenants" with Rev. Charlotte Lehmann
The language of covenant was often used in religious and governmental contexts at the time of the colonization of this continent and the later founding of our nation. Hand-in-hand with making covenant statements has been the breaking of those covenants, including within our faith tradition's 200-year history, right on up to the present time. In addition to exploring broken covenants, we will consider the ways we can heal them.

November 29, 2026 • "AI – What's Covenant Got to Do With it?" with Rev. Stacy Craig
Pulpit guest Rev. Stacy Craig's message this morning about AI emphasizes covenant as a way to go forward with embracing technology of this magnitude. Rev. Stacy Craig is the minister of the Chequamegon Unitarian Universalist Fellowship (CUUF) in Ashland, WI. She earned her M.Div. from United Theological Seminary (UTS) in St. Paul, Minnesota. Her training included working with restorative justice in the prison system and with people working through addiction and recovery.

MINISTER MUSINGS

REV. CHARLOTTE LEHMANN

During the week of 10/19-10/23 I was in Montgomery, AL for the in-person gathering of ministers enrolled in the UUA's Year Long Transition Ministry Training (YLTMT) program. It was an intense several days structured around the Equal Justice Initiative (EJI) history and culture sites, as well as visits to the Freedom Rides Museum, the Rosa Parks Museum, the Dexter Avenue Church and its parsonage, and presentations and reflections on American Civil Rights history and the application of lessons to situations involving transitions. I will be tying at least some of what I learned into upcoming worship services.

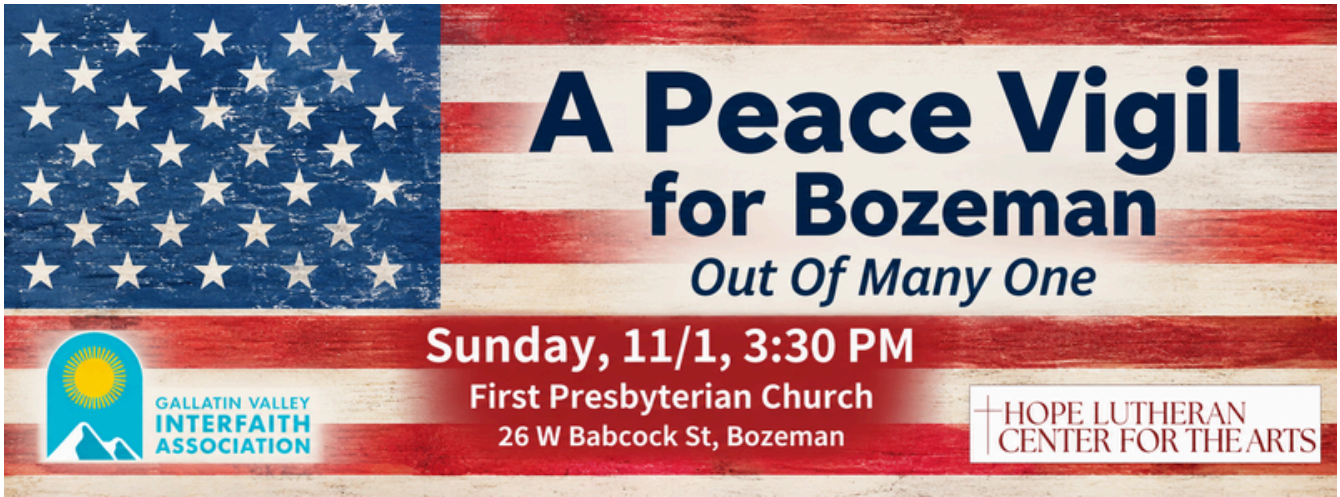

This month's theme for Woven Faith, the new UUA theme-based whole church curriculum, is "Covenant"; I feel that this theme is well-chosen for this particular November. While this is not one of the "J. PIGLET" shared values, we are a faith tradition rooted in covenant and the language of covenant is woven throughout the UUA's Article II bylaw adopted by the General Assembly in 2024, especially Section C-2.2, "Values and Covenant." [See this UUA webpage for the full wording – https://www.uua.org/uuagovernance/committees/article-ii-study-commission/new-article-ii-2024.]

I am aware that the winter holiday season always seems very full, but-and, for me, this feels especially true as the mid-term election approaches. There's a pre-election Peace Vigil on November 1st at 3:30 pm at First Presbyterian Church sponsored by the Gallatin Valley Interfaith Association (GVIA) and Hope Lutheran Center for the Arts. We will get to hear from Bruce Gourley about Democracy and Covenant the following Sunday morning. Not to mention our ongoing "Meeting the Moment" Stewardship drive and the traditional UUFB Thanksgiving Day dinner.

I welcome hearing about how UUFB marks the holidays and your wishes for how we might celebrate together.

I encourage anyone with concerns or pastoral needs to reach out to me via email or phone/voice mail to schedule a time to engage in conversation with me. I am at UUFB Tues-Fri from about 9 am – 5 pm. My calendar can be rather full, so please contact me so we can make time to address your needs. [On a personal note, I will be out-of-the-office on 11/25 and 11/27 as I manage a health-related matter.]

Blessings, Rev. Charlotte

RELIGIOUS EXPLORATION

Hello Kindred Spirits,

Happy Halloween, Samhain, and Day of the Dead everybody! I hope you all had the most wonderfully spooky, silly and sacred holiday season. In the classroom, we had a grand time exploring what it means to be "Living the Questions." The first Sunday of the month was one of the last hot and sunny days of the year and so our children were off enjoying the warmth of the earth before the ground froze over. The following week, we practiced living the question by exploring the significance of Indigenous Peoples' Day. Afterwards, we set up a giant Jenga tower and as the children pulled blocks, they had to answer the question written on it. It was a fun way to get to know each other a little more. The next week, Warren and Robyn led the children through a "Monster Mash" craft, where the kids glued and mashed together monsters out of miscellaneous junk that had been donated by several congregants. Special shout out to everyone who donated to that! We appreciate you a lot. Wrapping up the month, Wheels of Harmony came and sang for the whole congregation. Hearing that music ring through the sanctuary was quite the blessing for all of us. It also was our first intergenerational service using the play space and the children were very grateful to have an area of quiet engagement.

Going into November, our theme is Covenant. We will start out the month by defining what covenant means for UUs. Covenant is about how we want to be in the world. Then, we will discuss covenant as an act of resisting individualism because when we prioritize our own freedom over our community we cannot build the bridges necessary to create and sustain a community. The next week, we are going to discuss how covenants create community through a collaborative project. For the week of Thanksgiving, we will be exploring the difficult subject of broken covenants, which is what happens when there is harm in a community, such as how the pilgrims treated the indigenous people around them. Lastly, we will conclude our month of Covenant by discussing covenant through setting boundaries and how that makes us feel like we belong. Because as the former minister Rev. Duffy once told me, "Boundaries are how we know we are safe."

Blessings Everyone, Asherah B.

BOARD REPORT

Over the past month, the Board has made progress on several of its 2026–2027 goals:

Goal: Increase Fellowship membership by encouraging and supporting appropriate committee efforts

On September 21, more than 15 members of the Communications Committee, Hospitality & Membership Committee, and Board attended a workshop led by congregational growth consultant Peter Bowden. This fascinating webinar was arranged by the Communications Committee as part of its ongoing work to redevelop the Fellowship's website, but its implications go far beyond the website.

Peter shared insights about how people discover, visit, and become part of a faith community. He emphasized that today, a person's first experience of a congregation often happens online, through its website, social media, or recorded services. People may explore a congregation virtually for months before deciding to attend in person.

Once people do visit, a warm welcome is important, but being friendly is not the same as helping people feel connected. Newcomers need opportunities to develop meaningful relationships and find their place in the community, even before they're ready to become members or make other commitments. Peter encouraged us to think about the entire journey, from someone's first online encounter with UUFB to their growing sense of belonging and participation in our Fellowship.

Following the workshop, Board member James H. created a Visitor Journey Guidebook to help our committees identify and implement next steps. Watch for a video featuring our own Rev. Charlotte on our website soon! And if you'd like to help reimagine how we welcome newcomers and foster a sense of belonging at UUFB, please consider joining the Hospitality & Membership Committee.

Goal: Clarify high-level financial goals for the coming years

The (Semi-)Annual Meeting will take place January 24 (mark your calendars!). At this meeting, the Board will invite members to share their thoughts about long-range financial priorities, such as paying off our mortgage, supporting ministerial housing, and improving our ventilation system. A small group will meet in November to help frame the discussion.

Goal: Guide and support efforts to develop our music program

Thanks to the pianist search committee and Sunday Services Committee, we have filled all open spots for Sunday musicians through the end of 2026 and identified a promising candidate who may begin work as our full-time pianist in the new year. Kim H. is the Board liaison for the pianist search.

In addition to our work on these goals, the Board addressed staffing needs in our Religious Exploration program at its October meeting. As many of you know, our Religious Exploration teacher, Sheldon, resigned in early summer, and Jasmine, who served as a substitute teacher, has also left her position. The Board has authorized the Lifespan Religious Exploration Committee to launch a search for a new teacher to support our Coordinator of Religious Exploration, Asherah. Board member May V. will serve as the Board liaison for this search.

In Fellowship, Lisa B., President

UUFB Used Book Sale

Sunday, November 15, before and after service in the sanctuary

Everyone is invited to our UUFB Used Book Sale! It's the perfect time to find new books for holiday reading and gifts.

How do I get involved?
We're collecting gently used books, CDs, DVDs, and puzzles. We organize the items and offer them for sale Sunday morning for a suggested donation of just $2 per item. Donations are gratefully accepted the week before, Tuesday, Nov 10 through Friday, Nov 13. Please check with our Office Admin for building access; mornings are best.

How are the funds used?
All money raised goes into the Fellowship's general fund for future use.

What happens to leftover books?
Leftovers go to the bookshelves in our hallway, our local prison library, the Little Library out front, and other little libraries around town.

Can I help?
Yes! Join us to sort and organize on Saturday, Nov. 14 at 10:00 a.m. Many hands make it an enjoyable, engaging time. Sign up at: uufbozeman.org/book-sale.

Can I bring friends and family?
Of course! Invite friends and family to attend the service or stop by the sale after, around 11:15 a.m.

Thank you, everyone! Questions? Check in with Leona P.

Meeting the Moment Party

Story for All Ages

Have you ever walked into a room where you didn't know anyone and wished someone would just say hello?

Have you ever been the person who said it?

Are you looking for a way to meet more people and make new connections here at UUFB?

We know UUFB is a friendly place. But how can we help newcomers move beyond feeling welcomed to feeling that they truly belong?

Our Fellowship is launching some new efforts to help newcomers feel at home, build friendships, and find their place in our community. And we'd love your help!

We're looking for two or three people to join our Hospitality & Membership Committee and help us develop new and creative ways to welcome and connect newcomers. The committee is very small right now, so this is a wonderful opportunity to help shape something new.

Or perhaps you'd like to volunteer as a Sunday morning greeter, even occasionally? It's a great way to get to know more people yourself, while helping others feel at home.

No special experience is needed—just warmth, curiosity, and a willingness to reach out.

If you're interested in joining the committee or becoming a greeter, please reach out to James H or Lisa B. We'd love to talk with you!

What We Weave: Threads of Theology and Pedagogy

As we explore Covenant this month we are weaving with at least four threads from our living Unitarian Universalist tradition.

Thread One: The Puritans
Our religious ancestors in America were the early pilgrims who came and founded towns and churches that they based on mutual agreements, much like our modern covenants. Each congregation created its own covenant and operated with congregational polity. While we have evolved a great deal since those Puritan roots, we have retained this structure and practice of covenant and congregational polity.

Thread Two: James Luther Adams
In the mid-twentieth century the practice of covenanting was reintroduced to Unitarian congregations by James Luther Adams. Adams had seen the inability of churches and other institutions to resist Nazism, and was seeking ways to strengthen voluntary association and create communities of resistance. Covenanting is the spiritual practice and practical tool that he believed could bring individuals together into a We that would be strong and resilient even in the face of challenge. We reweave this thread into our faith formation journey each year as classroom covenants are created.

Thread Three: Teaching to Transgress and the Pedagogy of the Oppressed
Brazilian educator Paulo Freire developed the concept of the pedagogy of the oppressed, which was later further developed by bell hooks. In her book Teaching to Transgress: Education as the Practice of Freedom, hooks writes of the importance of shared vulnerability and risk taking between teachers and learners. Many educators use the language of covenant to describe how this kind of learning environment is created. Our classroom covenants are a liberatory pedagogical practice.

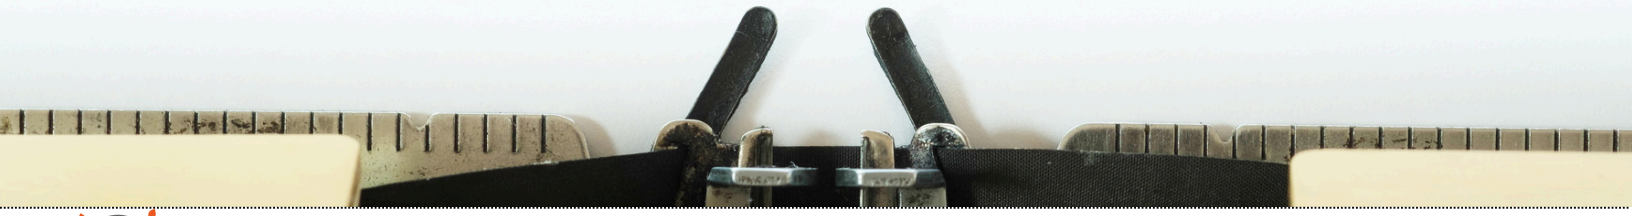

Thread Four: Come, Yet Again, Come
Our Covenants have also, of necessity, brought us the thread of brokenness and repair. As the descant to the popular hymn Come, Come, Whoever You Are says, “though you’ve broken your vows a thousand times” you are still invited to come, yet again, back into community and covenant. How to make repairs and return to our covenants is ongoing learning and work for people of all ages in our congregations.

Guest At Your Table Donation Boxes

With our government stopping most foreign aid what could be a response? Well, one possibility would be to revisit the "Guest at Your Table" donation drive through the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee. This 80-year-old program works for social justice and human rights around the world. The foundation is a simple cardboard box that you set at your table. This little box gives you a reminder to think about all the people around the world who need help and to put a donation in the box. Warren K. will be at the conference table after the service to answer questions and hand out the Guest at Your Table donation boxes. We will be turning in the boxes on Sunday, December 6th to send the donation to the UUSC.
